In 1931, my grandfather, Richard Keating, worked for a fryer manufacturer. It was the middle of the great depression and times were tough.

The company wanted their salesmen to bring each written order back to the office, making it very hard to sell and make any money. My father, Richard T. Keating, II (Dick), had just graduated from Johns Hopkins University with a degree in Mechanical Engineering. It was my grandfather's idea that my father could design a better fryer and he would sell it. So my father stayed in Chicago designing equipment and running the manufacturing end while my grandfather went on the road from Chicago to Baltimore selling Keating equipment.

Our product line began to incorporate more equipment and Keating's presence in the industry was established. Today we are known for high performance, quality and durability in all of our products. We are proud to be a family-owned business entering into our 90th year.

Keating of Chicago would like to express our sincere appreciation for your continued trust in the Keating brand. Much of our success is a result of customers sharing their satisfaction in our equipment with others in the industry. We hope you will continue to spread the word as we strive to earn your respect for years to come.

Very Truly,

Eliza Keating
President
